Article 1

Reich laws may be passed by the Reich Government as well as through the procedure laid down in the Reich constitution. This also includes laws named in the Reich constitution under article 85, paragraph 2 and article 87.

Article 2

The laws passed by the Reich Government may deviate from the Reich constitution provided that they do not deal with the institution of the Reichstag and the Reich Council. The rights of the Reich President remain unimpaired.

Article 3

The Reich laws as resolved by the Reich government are drawn by the Reich Chancellor and published in the Reich Law Gazette. Unless otherwise stated they come into force on the day following publication. Articles 68 to 77 of the Reich constitution do not apply to laws passed by the Reich Government.

Article 4

Treaties between the Reich and foreign countries which deal with articles of the Reich legislation need not have the approval of the parties which participated in the legislation. The Reich Government issues the directives necessary for implementing these treaties.
